In this stressful economic climate so many people in the workforce have been negatively impacted. Consequently, it has become more important for everyone to understand how to manage current resources and attain, retain and grow personal assets to ensure financial stability and achieve long-term economic independence. In this interactive workshop, attendees will leave with practical financial tools that can be easily implemented to make better financial decisions in planning, budgeting, managing credit, and avoiding financial pitfalls. The workshop will include a 30 minutes of one-to-one Q & A where attendees may ask personal questions confidentially to a volunteer financial planner or credit counselor.

Learning Goals:

- Budgeting: the foundation of financial planning and long term economic stability
- Strategies for managing credit and credit cards
- The ins and outs of credit/reports and scores, including common myths
- Spotting financial scams and preventing identity theft

Who should attend: Any staff interested in personal financial education for themselves, staff and/or for their clients, including executive directors, program managers, and others.

Presenter: Chris Dlugozima, Certified Consumer Credit Counselor. Mr. Dlugozima is a financial educator with GreenPath Debt Solutions, a 501(c)3 organization that empowers individuals to better manage their money and thus improve their quality of life. With over a decade of experience counseling individuals in financial difficulty, Mr. Dlugozima travels around the tri-state area to educate people on a variety of financial literacy topics. In 2011, he led over 100 presentations and through his efforts, reached more than 3000 individuals. He has been featured on WABC TV, NY 1, The New York Daily News and the NY Times.
